Lucky's Tale () is a 2007 animated adventure comedy fantasy film that was directed, co-written, and co-produced by Christopher Miller and Phil Johnston and produced by Phil Johnston, Mark Miller, Mike Smith, Jason Clark, and Gary Sanchez. It was released on November 19, 2007 by Walt Disney Pictures. It was the fifth Disney animated feature film in the Lilo & Stitch franchise, the first one since the direct-to-video series Stitch! The Movie (2005). This is the final Disney animated film produced by Rhythm & Hues Studios. In the film, Bonnie Planket, a member of the Easter Bunny's royal guard, travels with her menagerie of animals on a mission to rescue a friend's kid from a vengeful monkey. The film is a loose adaptation of Jonathan Swift's 1726 short story "Vanity Fair". Plot Marooned on the island of Loafinblooze, Bonnie Planket and her menagerie find themselves befriended by a family of baby storks. Bonnie later discovers the storks' nest area had been stolen by a greedy, rebellious monkey named Swifty. After the storks have flown, Swifty steals a starfish float and resembles an Easter Bunny. When Planket and the band of animals attempt to retrieve the storks' eggs, a battle ensues, causing Swifty to flee. Meanwhile, Junior Planket and some pirate frogs have kidnapped Swifty's nephew Buster Swatch. With the help of the delivery stork Galileo Segue, they enter the villages of the fabled island of Loafinblooze. Junior shows Swifty's nephew a spinning wheel, which Swifty immediately falls in love with. He disguises himself as the Easter Bunny, though he has trouble comprehending the wheel's mechanism. The spines and flounces of the world's most coveted ball gowns are produced on Loafinblooze. Joanna, Swifty's agent, impersonates a mermaid, telling Galileo to share them. On Galiflomboy's orders, Galileo trades the spines and flounces for the stork eggs. Galileo and his crew are apprehended by Joanna's squadron of pirate frogs. Swifty is knocked unconscious and the boys capture most of the spines and flounces. Joanna eventually catches up with the Balloon Boys and their airship, leading them to an island known as Dark-a sacred island where the Pandemic is a VR math game designed for schools and small groups. Using cutting-edge technology, it allows learners to manipulate 3D objects, feel the force of gravity and experience the comfort of the exercise ball. Ever since the year 2000, the most important health issue that has captured the public’s attention is the pandemic threat. The current global pandemic wreaks havoc on world economies, social systems and the world's health care systems. Because Prisms has been developed with the help of the National Science Foundation, this module is built to support the learning process during our teenage years and in higher education. Pandemic is designed as a “hands-on” training tool to engage the player's senses and test their knowledge - those who can touch, feel, and manipulate real-life objects - vs the more traditional approach of viewing learning modules through a screen. In Pandemic, the player is one of many “Shelter Supervisors” assigned to an elementary school in New York City in the event of a pandemic. Shelter Supervisors can:

- Model the difference between the current and the ideal city population, determining the implications for the city's hospitals and people;
- Raise the required number of hospital beds, finding the need for more beds vs the lack thereof;
- Evaluate the city’s needs in terms of how to prioritize patients and allocate them among the available beds;
- Evaluate the city’s needs in terms of evaluating the costs of multiple strategies for pandemic containment and make recommendations to the mayor.

In Pandemic, the player will take on the role of a Shelter Supervisor and use their intuition and decision-making skills to solve the problem of how to contain the pandemic. The player will use mathematical modelling, background knowledge and visual stimuli to guide them in their path towards understanding and acting effectively towards pandemic control. A: The descriptions on this page talk about how we use mathematics to model the spread of diseases: Our approach is basically to model the spread as a large tree where the ultimate leaf nodes are infected individuals and disease-related death. Each intermediate node represents a case of contact, and each edge represents the movement of a case from one person to another. Often we model the
